Brittney Savino advises clients—including corporations and insurance companies—on a wide range of insurance-related matters. She has also handled personal injury litigation, represented major cruise lines in maritime litigation, and provided support in white collar criminal cases.

Committed to ensuring her clients are informed, Brittney partners with them through the litigation process. By analyzing liability and potential exposure issues, she is able to provide simple solutions to her clients' legal problems and help them mitigate future risks.

Before joining Hinshaw, Brittney practiced with firms in Miami and Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. Most recently, she worked at a regional firm in Miami, where she represented corporate defendants and insurance companies in personal injury litigation.

Brittney also gained invaluable experience from internships. In addition to working for the Miami-Dade County Public Defender's Office, she was a judicial intern for The Honorable Norma S. Lindsey, Eleventh Judicial Circuit of Florida. As a student, Brittney was also a legal intern for STREET Law and the Children & Youth Law Clinic.
