Henry concentrates his practice in environmental, energy, land use, and municipal law. His broader practice includes representing businesses and municipalities in a variety of commercial and contract-based litigation, tax assessment litigation under the Real Property Tax Law, and special proceedings under Article 78 of the Civil Practice Law and Rules.

As part of his municipal practice, Henry represents and counsels municipalities in a variety of matters, including those related to zoning, land use, code enforcement, takings, the State Environmental Quality Review Act, the Freedom of Information Law, and the Open Meetings Law. In addition, he represents municipalities and school districts in defending tax assessment challenge litigation.

Henry draws on his experience in the property tax arena to advise developers of renewable energy projects across New York State on real property tax implications, including the interplay of Real Property Tax Law Section 487 exemptions and payment-in-lieu-of-taxes (PILOT) agreements. Through his efforts, developers are able to better evaluate and prepare for real estate tax liabilities before and during the life of their projects. He represents developers and other clients before boards of assessment review and in Supreme Court litigating property tax exemptions and valuation issues. As part of his property tax practice, Henry also counsels clients on real property exemptions and incentives, including Real Property Tax Law Section 420-a for non-profit entities and Real Property Tax Law 485-b for commercial and industrial facilities.

In connection with his practice, Henry counsels both municipalities and private clients on land use and real estate development issues, including area and use variances, and project approvals, and has represented these clients in litigation over zoning matters.

As part of his broader practice, Henry also serves as outside general counsel for a public university student government. In this capacity, he advises on policy matters, regulatory and legal compliance, risk management, and contract review and

Experience

The Hodgson Russ team of Daniel Spitzer, Alicia Legland, Meredith Morgan, and David Stark acted as counsel on regulatory and zoning matters for a joint venture between two of the nation's leading energy solutions companies. The two businesses, a Mid-Atlantic owner-operator of commercial renewable energy projects and a renewable and a natural gas company in the Southwest, entered into a financing arrangement with a commercial bank supporting four energy storage projects in the City of New York. Energy storage is an essential element in the State's aggressive plan for reducing reliance on fossil fuel facilities.

Hodgson Russ secured a victory for the Trustees of the Masonic Hall and Asylum Fund (the "Masonic Hall"), in litigation challenging the Town of Henrietta's denial of a Real Property Tax Law Section 420-a real property tax exemption. This provision establishes a two-prong test, that the property be owned by a non-profit entity and used for non-profit purposes. On the second prong, state law allows the exemption for vacant land where there are concrete plans for a future use, even if the construction has not yet started. The Town's denial focused on this second prong.

Monroe County Supreme Court granted the Masonic Hall's Petition because the evidence demonstrated that the Masonic Hall had legitimate plans for a future senior living and fraternal complex, had spent substantial sums in furtherance of the project, and had applied for (and eventually received) the required zoning approvals. The Court rejected the Town's arguments that the property was revenue-producing and that insufficient efforts had been made to satisfy the legal requirements. In addition to granting the exemption, the Court granted full refunds of property taxes with statutory interest, and, notably, granted costs and disbursements against the Town.

A copy of the decision is available here. The key takeaway from this case is the importance of building a record through Board minutes, budget, correspondence, applications, and contracts demonstrating the future use is a legitimate goal, particularly if it takes years of planning and fundraising before a project is in use.

If you have any questions on real property tax exemptions or other real property tax issues, contact Daniel Spitzer, Henry Zomerfeld, or Michael Risman in our Tax Assessment Practice.

Peter Lutz and Henry Zomerfeld were successful in obtaining an exemption under Real Property Tax Law § 420-a for a non-profit client's medical office that it purchased in the City of Rochester. The City initially denied the exemption because the property was leased to a third-party. After demonstrating that the lessee was a related non-profit entity carrying out the mission of the non-profit lessor, the Rochester Board of Assessment Review recommended the Assessor grant the exemption. The Assessor accepted the recommendation and granted the exemption. As a result, the property is wholly exempt from property taxes for this year. The exemption will remain subject to annual renewal.
