

HUGH M. RUSS ASKS NTSB TO REOPEN FLIGHT 3407 INVESTIGATION ON BEHALF OF VICTIMS' FAMILIES

July 15, 2013

Hodgson Russ partner Hugh M. Russ, III sent a letter to the chair of the National Transportation Safety Board last month urging the board to reopen its investigation of the February 2009 crash of Continental Connection Flight 3407 after it was revealed by a Colgan Air executive that a Federal Aviation Administration official threatened to shut down the regional airline in August 2008 because of safety concerns. Mr. Russ represents several of the crash victims' families.

Read the full story in the Buffalo News article "Families of Flight 3407 Victims Want NTSB to Reopen Investigation," published July 13.

Attorneys

Hugh Russ III

Practices & Industries

Product Liability & Complex Tort

