

HODGSON RUSS CLIENT CLEANEDISON INTERVIEWED ABOUT GREEN BUILDING INDUSTRY

August 7, 2009

Executives from CleanEdison<sup>sm</sup> were guests on Good Morning America, July 28. They were invited to discuss their revolutionary approach to promoting sustainability and green-building practices, including by offering both education and actual energy consulting services like LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) certification and test preparation to professionals in the green-building industry.

CleanEdison<sup>sm</sup> serves federal, state, and local governments; building design and construction firms; owners; operators; and real estate investors. They have educated hundreds of companies and tens of thousands of individuals in green-building practices, both through customized training and the largest open enrollment green-training program in the nation.

Hodgson Russ attorneys, including Ronniel S. Levy, a partner in the Corporate & Securities Practice Group in Hodgson Russ's New York office, have been pleased to assist CleanEdison<sup>sm</sup> with a range of their legal needs.
