The managing partner of the firm's Flint, Michigan office, Audrey J. Forbush serves as a member of Plunkett Cooney's Board of Directors and as Co-Leader of the Governmental Law Practice Group.

Ms. Forbush focuses her trial practice primarily in the area of municipal liability with particular expertise in police liability issues, such as search and seizure, use of force, pursuits and correctional law; civil rights; whistleblower; labor and employment (discipline, wrongful discharge and contract related issues), zoning and personal injury. She also advises public and private universities with respect to Title IX claims of alleged sexual assaults on campus.

In addition to her municipal and employment law practices, Ms. Forbush has extensive experience in the area of professional liability, particularly with respect to the defense of physicians and hospitals in medical liability cases.

Ms. Forbush is a member of the Michigan Bar Association, the Genesee County Bar Association and serves on the Board of the Governmental Law Section of the Michigan State Bar. She was selected to serve as legal adviser to the Law Enforcement Action Forum, an organization consisting of select law enforcement executives throughout the state of Michigan that addresses trending issues in law enforcement and drafts model policies. Ms. Forbush also routinely provides legal updates to the Law Enforcement Officers Regional Training Commission.
